MR. HALL the British Consul at Yokohama, in his report for 1895 remarks that the event of the year which is likely to have most influence on the future of trade was commercial clauses in the treaty of peace concluded with China at Shimonoseki. He briefly enumerates the privileges secured by clause VI. of that treaty, reminds us that these privileges, by virtue of the most favoured nation clause in the several treaties. are won for all the other foreign Powers as well as for Japan, and goes on to say:-"The British and other foreign merchants served in the Pavilion. The Band of the Hong-"in Chipa were not slow to avail themselves "of the newly acquired right of manufac-"turing. Within four months from the "publication of the treaty four companies "for working cotton mills were started in "Shanghai, and two for the same purpose "by Japanese capitalists of Osaka. Another. "curious result of this clause in the treaty "of Shimonoseki was the sudden silencing to those researches the inspiration of "of the Eastern Bimetallic League. The "members thereof are giving up the uphill "struggle they had so strenuously engaged "in, and are not now so anxious to get the "difference removed. The extent of this "new cotton manufacturing industry in "China will not be very great at first, but "it will grow, and Manchester, severely as "it lies suffered hitherto, will have a harder " fight than ever to make its factories pay." The Japanese companies mentioned by Mr. the effects of the increasingly potent cords HALL have abandoned, for the time being at all events, their intention of establish blood was drawn from an animal which had ing cotton mills at Shanghai, but th foreign companies have their works well from it after it had clotted was introduced under advanced and will soon commence running. Mr. HALL, it will be observed, couples the promotion of the cotton industry at Shanghai with the silver question, which has undoubtedly had a good deal to after it had already received a poisonous dose to with its inception. immediate neighbourhood of the consuming markets there is no reason why the cotto industry at Shanghai should not prove a brilliant success, even though the price of labour should rise in proportion as the price of silver has fallen. The crucial point is the attitude that will be assumed towards the new industry by the Chinese Government. In Japan the question of governmental interference does not arise, but in China the circumstances are differont and every possible endeavour wil be made by the mandarina to impose squeezes directly and indirectly and favour the native owned mills at the expense of those under foreign control. That it will be possible to resist these endeavours sufficiently to prevent the industry being completely strangled we entertain no doubt, but of Chinese officialdom will always constitute an element of difficulty in the operation of the mills. Perhaps after all the promoters may see reason to regret that they did not establish their enterprise in this colony, under the protection of the British flag, notwithstanding the superior natural advantages claimed for Shanghai.

His distinguished pupil Hehring has expressly attributed. the work which led him and his since famous collaborateur, the Japanese Kita sate, to their surprising discovery of antitoxic serum. They found that if an animal of a species liable to diphtheria or totanus received a quantity of the respective toxin, so small to be harmless, and afterwards, at suitable intervals, successively atronger and atronger doses, the creature, in course of time, acquired such a tolerance for the poison as to be able to receive with impunity a quantity very much greater than would at the outset have proved fatal. So far we have nothing more than scome to correspond with in Pastence treatment of rabias. But what was entirely new in their results, was that, if acquired this high degree of artificial immunity. and some of the clear fluid or serum which exuded the skin of another animal, this second animal acquired a strong, though more transient immunity against the particular toxia concerned. The serum in some way counteracted the toxin or was antitoxic. But, more than that, if some of the antitoxic serum was applied to an animal success throughout and will result in a suborenture, provided that too long a time proved to be not only preventive but curative. THE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY'S CONCERT.

A ballad concert, in aid of the funds of the Hongkong Benevolent Society, was given on Thursday evening in the dining room of the Peak Hotel. The room was unfortunately much too small to comfortably accommodate the large andience that assembled, and regrets were expressed that the City Hall had not been tinent, the Dardanus for London, the Kaisow engaged. Amongst those present were H.E. for New York, the Hailoung for Amoy, and Sir William Robinson, Major-General Wilsone Black, and Commodore Swinton Holland, whose names appeared on the programme as patrons. The Benevolent Society's concert may now, we believe, be looked upon as an annual fixture and as opening the musical season, and if the committee are always able to afford the community such a rich treat and such pleasant It is understood to be uncertain as yet where rurprises as last year and this year the on tertainments will be looked forward to with pleasant anticipation. Mr. E. H. Parker writes to the Times: The Peking Gazetto of July 25th confirms so literally what I have said about likin that I may as well translate it. The Governor Ch'en Pao-chen of Hu-nan province (a remarkably honest official, who has just got a couple of vicercys into trouble for conduct savouring of corruption) thus writes direct to the Emperor!-

"I duly received through the Beard your Majesty's circular commands to improve the likin and customs collections. I venture to observe that the likin system is one for which there was in its inception no help (yuan-pu-te-i); but at the present time both merchants and people are so oppressed by it that it is positively out of the question to think of increasing it. However, if the administration of it could be properly carried out, things would not reach such a pitch that, over and above the regular collection, there need be any hamssing oppression; and if this were so, the march of commerce would be as much facilitated as the volume of traffic would be increased, whilst on the other hand London, 14th September. Typan, the man who attained consider able notoriety some fifteen years ago account of the leading part he took the campaign of ontrage in Ireland, but who evaded arrest and had disappeared for a considerable time past, has been arrested by an Eng. lish detective in a hotel at Boulogne, in France. He is charged with being converned in the Phonix Park (ragody on the 6th May, 1892, when Lord Frederick Cavendish, Chief Scoretary for Ireland, and Mr. Burke, Permanent Under Scoretary, were murdered, and also with making hombs, which were intended to be used in England. Typan admits his identity, and appears to be greatly surprised at having been traced. A number of incriminating documents were found in his baggage, and also a considerable sum of money.

Two other arrests have been made, to which some importance is attached. A man named Bell has been arrested at Glasgow, and another man named Wellace at Rotterdam, on suspicion of being concerned in a dynamite conspiracy and it is believed that they are associates of

Two Irish Americans recently arrived Antworp, and owing to suspicions being entertnined of them, they were kept shadowed by English police. They, however, finding that they were watched, fled from Antwerp last week, and the house occupied by them has since been searched, with the result that a complete chemical laboratory, together with a quantity of bombs and explosives, was discovered. Another man has been arrested at Rotterdam and bombs and incriminating letters were found in his possession. -In connection with the arrest of Tynan and several others on suspicion of being concerned in a dynamite conspiracy, it appears that the English police were informed by their American agents that there was every reason to believe that a recurrence of Fenian outrages was imminent, and when Tynan and the other suspected persons left America they were kept shadowed by detectives, with the result that they were arrested on the Continent, as already i

Reports from Antwerp state, however, that the men arrested there as dynamiters are not Fenians, but were engaged in a plot against the life of the Czar, which it was intended to carry out on the occasion of his Majesty's forthcoming visit to London. Lordon, 15th September It is stated that the detectives had for some ime been aware that the Feniaus and Nihilists n America were plotting bomb outrages directed against the Czer, the Queen, and various high officials. Ten men who were suspected, including Tynan, Bell, Huines, Wallace, Gratz, and Perry travelled from America to Europe by different routes, all being apparently provided with abundant funds, and they were all carefull shadowed and their movements followed. They lived in a very reckless fashion, especially Tynan, who indulged largely in champagne. They openly avowed their strong sympathy with Feni-anism, and were in the habit of consorting with gange of Anarchists. The supposed conspi rators met in Paris in August last, where it is alleged they perfected their plans. They then soparated. Bell going to Glasgow, and Haines and Wallage to Antwerp. It is believed that Wallace is identical with the man Kearney who was connected with the explosion at the Haines and Wallace, with others, it has been

Haines and Wallace, who had been shadowed became suspicious, and fled to Rotterdam, where they booked for America; but they were arrested in a hotel, and in their possession were monts in cipher, and £2,000 in money. The key of the cipher was also discovered and this showed Typan's complicity in the plot. The whole of the arrests were made Saturday night.

In making the arrest of Tynan at a hotel Boulogue, the police had to force the door of his bodroom, when he was found in a drunken condition. He had also attempted to disguise himself, and had his beard shaved off. Tynan admits his complicity with the other consoirs. tors, and states that he expects to be hanged. Tynan has been brought before the court and remanded, and it is expected that the extradition, proceedings will occupy about a forthight. The police express confidence that the French authorities will surrender Tynan under the extradition treaty between the two countries. Bell, who was arrested at Glasgow, had staved at a hotel there for a week, and represented himself as a tourist. He had plenty of money, and it is supposed that he was seeking recruits. He was in possession of letters and telegrams from Tynan requesting him to visit. Boulogue, but warning him not to bring any of the "rotten stuff" which Tynan declares he found in the laboratory.

A letter was also found upon Wallace, in which he was invited to proceed to Boulogns if he was afraid of remaining in Scotland, but the letter further declared that cowardice would not London, 16th September.

It has further transpired that before leaving America Typan unfolded a plot directed against the Prince of Wales. It was proposed to hire a house opposite to Marlborough House, the London residence, of His Royal Highness, and to excavate a tunnel under the street, with the object of exploding a quantity of dynamite in Marlborough House, and thus destroying the Prince. The plot, it is stated; was supported by a group of Nihilists at Chicago, headed by a chemist named Rabinovitz. and these Nihilists provided the funds for which the labour dispute had occurred, with the from numerous enquiries, the fever is none carrying out the scheme. In a letter found in the possession of the prisoner Walisco reference is made to an intended attack upon a crowned head who was about to visit the Queen. Bombs were found under the pillows of Wallace and Haines when there men were arrested. The bombs were of a new pattern, and were request to the French authorities for the detention of Tynan, who was arrested at Boulogue, pending the usual proceedings for his extradition. It is, however, feared that in the event of it being proved that Typan is a naturalised American citizen his extradition will be refused by the French Government. It has transpired that Tynan, the organiser of the alleged dynamite conspiracy, stayed for three days at Berchem, near Antwerp, where the bomb factory was discovered, and that with a party of eight, including Kearney and Haines, the two men arrested at Rotterdam, he visited the factory daily. London, 18th September.

The claim of Tynan to be an American citizen is as already reported, likely to interfere with his extradition by the French Government, and it has now been ascertained that Funan was naturalised in the United States in It is stated that the real name of the man Bell, who was arrested at Glasgow in connection with the alleged dynamite plot, is Ivory, and that he is a wealthy publicau in New
